

Payment & Refund Policy

Payment methods, authorization holds, and refund timing

QUICK ANSWER

ShopSphere accepts major credit and debit cards, PayPal, ShopSphere gift cards, and ShopSphere account credit. Refunds return to the original tender whenever possible.

1. Charges and authorization holds

- Card orders receive an authorization at checkout. The final charge is captured when the item ships; split shipments may create separate charges.
- A canceled or failed order may leave a pending authorization. ShopSphere releases it immediately, but the bank may take 3-7 business days to remove it.
- Taxes are calculated from the delivery address. Any promotional discount is allocated across eligible items.

2. Payment problems

- If payment fails, confirm the billing address, security code, available funds, and bank approval. ShopSphere cannot override a bank decline.
- Do not repeatedly submit checkout while a result is pending. First check Orders and email for an order number.
- For a suspected duplicate charge, send support the order number, charge dates, amounts, and last four card digits only.

3. Refund method and timing

- Approved refunds are issued after cancellation or return inspection. ShopSphere processing takes 1-2 business days.
- After issuance, cards usually post in 3-7 business days; PayPal in 1-3 business days; ShopSphere credit and gift-card balances within 24 hours.
- Shipping fees are refunded only when the full order was canceled before shipment or the item was damaged, defective, incorrect, or lost in transit.

4. Split tender and disputes

- For split payments, the gift-card or account-credit portion is restored first; the remainder returns to the other original payment method.
- If the original card is closed, the issuing bank normally redirects the refund. Ask the bank to trace it using the refund reference from ShopSphere.
- Contact ShopSphere before filing a chargeback so support can investigate. A chargeback may pause a related refund while the bank reviews the dispute.
